To Hunter OZ Macht, Mommy's little T. rex —H. M.

For my ladybirds —J. G.

When you wake every morning,
what's the first thing you do?

Do you look for cereal to eat or for leaves to chew?

Can't brush your teeth because your toothbrush is too small? Do you wish you had one made for someone really tall?

If this sounds like you, then I'm pretty sure you may just be a dinosaur!
